

Dean's Speaker Series

Concentra and the Resurgence of the Financial Co-operative Model

Ken Kosolofski

President and Chief Executive Officer
Concentra Financial

With the trend for today's financial institutions to move to a more customer-centric business model, and with impending changes in federal legislation for credit unions, Concentra Financial believes its strategies are in line for success. Join Ken Kosolofski, President and CEO of Concentra, for a presentation about the state of today's co-operative financial system and how operating under this model affords Concentra the opportunity to highlight the value it offers to Canada's credit union community and in turn, grow its own business.

Tuesday, 26 March 2013
4:00 – 5:30 pm / Room 18
Edwards School of Business

Reception to Follow

Ken's career began almost thirty years ago, when he received his Bachelor of Commerce and chartered accountant designation. He held senior financial positions with health and government organizations before joining the credit union system, working first with Credit Union Electronic Transaction Services and then SaskCentral, where he served as CFO. In 2010, Ken was appointed CEO of Concentra. Eager to carry on the work of developing its business model and growing the value Concentra delivers to credit unions, his enthusiasm and commitment continually energize the Concentra team. Ken is a prairie boy and proud of his Saskatchewan roots. A believer in the power of building communities, he actively participates in a number of community organizations, including the Regina Food Bank. He and his wife, Darlene, have raised three children, all of whom continue to live in Regina.