

Hartley and Margaret Fredeen Scholarship in Co-operatives Studies

Value: $5,000

The Hartley and Margaret Fredeen Scholarship is offered annually to a student who is conducting research on co-operatives, either entering or continuing studies in a master's or doctoral program at the University of Saskatchewan. Students who are currently enrolled in the Graduate Certificate in the Social Economy, Co-operatives, and Nonprofit Sector (GSECN) are also eligible to apply.

The Fredeen Scholarship honours Margaret and Hartley Fredeen, who lived their lives in Saskatchewan believing that co-operatives contribute to stable, economically inclusive and peaceful societies. Margaret and Hartley and their six children are all alumni of the University of Saskatchewan and the Fredeen family continues to hold a deep and long-standing relationship with the University.

The goal of the scholarship is to support students in creating and sharing knowledge about co-operatives. The successful applicant for the Hartley and Margaret Fredeen Scholarship in Co-operative Studies will be chosen based upon the applicant's proposed research exploring the ways that co-operatives can make our lives better, whether that be locally or globally.

Application procedure:

Submission of a letter of application outlining experience with co-operatives and community development, accompanied by a copy of university transcripts, and one reference letter.

Application deadline: November 1, 2024
